A Ladder of Swords

From "A Ladder of Swords"—Reduced.—Copyright, 1904, by Harper & Brothers.

by

GILBERT PARKER

Author of "The Right of Way"

IN wholly different vein from the author's last novel, The Right of Way, comes this exquisite romance, delightful in conception, swift and compelling in interest, and written in the finished style of this great novelist. The story recounts the love of two Huguenot refugees, their fugitive life on the island of Jersey in the British Channel. Later, the scene changes to England, where exciting intrigue and startling situations in the palace of Queen Elizabeth result in repeated dangers for the faithful lovers, but they finally escape the hazardous favor of the great queen and are united. The scenes on the island of Jersey are of idyllic freshness and beauty, and in the Seigneur of Rozel, the lord of the island, the author has produced a character of delightful humor and braggadocio. It is a thoroughly rounded, satisfying story, written with brilliancy and charm of style.

Illustrated by the Kinneys. Post 8vo, Cloth, $1.50

NOTES IN SEASON.

E. J. CLODE, New York City, calls attention to "The Pillar of Light," by Louis Tracy, of which the scene is an English lighthouse where a charming love story is enacted in the midst of beautiful surroundings, varied by a mad Atlantic gale.

LITTLE, BROWN & CO. announce the fourth American edition of Phillips Oppenheim's ingenious story of London life, entitled "Anna the Adventuress;" and the third edition of "The Wood-Carver of 'Lympus," by M. E. Waller, one of those books which may be read over and over and are becoming more and more rare.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready "A Ladder of Swords," by Gilbert Parker, author of "The Right of Way," which recounts the romance of two Huguenot refugees and their life on the Island of Jersey in the British Channel. Later the scene changes to England and exciting scenes in the palace of Queen Elizabeth are described with delightful humor.

LOTHROP PUBLISHING CO. have just ready "The Loves of Edwy," a novel by Cecil O'Neill Wilson, wife of Harry Leon Wilson, the successful author of "The Spenders." Mrs. Wilson has been known hitherto as an illustrator, her work often appearing in the columns of Puck, but it seems probable she will become fully as prominent as an author as she has been as an artist.

DODGE PUBLISHING CO. have in "Mother Stork's Baby Book" one of the publications that are always safe to lay in for the Christmas season, no matter in what section of the land a bookstore is located. It is beautified by illustrations and hand-colored pages by Albertine Randall Wheelan, and the thoughts of mothers are given in the words of R. L. Stevenson and Eugene Field. The paper has been selected with a view to make the mothers' entries add to the appearance of the book.

L. C. PAGE & CO. have just ready an artistic volume devoted to "The Cathedrals of Southern France," by Francis Miltoun, illustrated with many graceful drawings and sketches by Blanche McManus and numerous maps; "The Green Diamond," a detective story, the opening scene of which is set in India at the time of the Great Durbar of 1902, by Arthur Morrison; and a pretty volume in the series Phyllis' Field Friends by Lenore E. Mulets, in which "Stories of Little Animals" are told for little readers, with illustrations by Sophie Schneider.

HENRY HOLT & CO. will bring out immediately "Fergy the Guide, and His Moral and Instructive Lies About Beasts, Birds and Fishes," a most amusing and original book by H. S. Canfield. There have been a good many serious stories of animal intelligence that have stretched credulity pretty hard. These "lies" may prove almost as easy of belief, but also possessed of certain engaging freedom. Albert D. Blashfield, well known for his funny animal pictures in Life and elsewhere, contributes fifty sketches that aid in smashing the verities.

THE continued demand for E. F. Benson's new novel, "The Challoners," gives the publishers, J. B. Lippincott Company, reason to believe that its sales are to rival those of his famous "Dodo," and they have sent the book again to press. They also report that the interest in Russia has contributed to a largely increased demand for "Olive Latham," Mrs. Voynich's new novel, which, since its publication, has been one of the best selling books on the Lippincott list. They also report a revived interest in "A Daughter of the Snows," Jack London's story of the far North.

The story opens in the childhood of the three leading characters, whose lives seem to be inextricably interwoven. The father of the heroine "Jane" is an educated impecunious Irishman, whose amusing traits recall characters of Dickens. Jane and her artist lover "Juggs" are both beloved by "Edwy" who gives his name to the book. The love story is the central theme, with its misunderstanding and often tragic episodes.

They love each other, but their love is made a means by the "Master" towards the highest spiritual plane. The author's religious views on philosophy are indicated through many conversations.

Wilson, Harry Leon. The seeker; il. by Rose Cecil O'Neill. N. Y., Doubleday, Page & Co., 1904. [Ag.] c. 7+341 p. D. cl., †$1.50.

The author of "The spenders" through his characters discusses the various forms of religion that have been accepted and outlived by the world. A whole-souled old Presbyterian grandfather in educating his orphan grandsons is aghast at the effect produced by the dogmas he has held sacred upon the poetic, ideal nature of the one and the self-conscious, diplomatic nature of the other. The older boy refuses to become a minister in the Presbyterian church and joins the Protestant Episcopal body, becoming a fashionable rector. The younger wanders off to find a God and a satisfying faith. On his return he argues that all faith emanates from within and also accepts the doctrine of good works. He sacrifices himself for his brother's domestic happiness. The Episcopal rector finally goes over to the Roman church.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

AUGUST 27, 1904.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE "WEBSTER" CONTROVERSY.

NOAH WEBSTER will always be gratefully remembered in American literature for his double service both in his pioneer work in behalf of copyright and in that first dictionary of the American language which bore his name and the impress of his work. He did the notable thing of recognizing that the English language in America had a character of its own, partly in the development of new words, or, as in many "Yankeeisms," the preservation or resuscitation of old forms disused in the mother country, and partly in differences of orthography, as notably in the dropping of the u from honor and the like words. His "American" dictionary illustrated the tendency in America to conserve the old and good forms and to progress in the direction of phonetic spelling. Of his American spelling book, more than a million copies have been sold in a single year, and although its use is decreasing, it is still in vogue in many parts of the country. The modest volume of his American dictionary became the precursor of a remarkable series of dictionaries, large and small, comprehensive and condensed—the work, as scholarship grew and American literature extended, of succeeding editors and compilers, scholars who entered into the spirit of his work and continued its influence long after his life and his copyrights had expired. The Webster series, starting from this personal source, has of late years been in the hands of the G. & C. Merriam Co., of Springfield, Mass., and culminated in Webster's International, published in 1890. For years the Worcester dictionaries, published by the Lippincott house, were practically the only rival of the Webster series. Later the Century Dictionary, founded on John Ogilvie's Imperial English dictionary of 1850, (itself originally an expansion of Webster's early dictionary,) but broadened with all the resources of American scholarship into the greatest single dictionary of the English language yet completed, and the remarkable Standard Dictionary of Messrs. Funk & Wagnalls, have added to the reputation of American lexicography. The culminating triumph of English lexicography, the great historical dictionary of the Philological Society of England, edited by Dr. Murray and his associates, is yet many years from completion.

Besides this Webster series the name "Webster" has been used for certain dictionaries such as the school Websters published by the American Book Company, which are understood to be under arrangement with the Messrs. Merriam, and also for dictionaries in more or less opposition to the series issued by Messrs. Merriam and unauthorized by them. For the most part these have not attempted to compete with such monumental works as the Webster International Dictionary, but have filled a more modest field. The Merriam house has sought in several cases to restrain other publishers from using the title "Webster's Dictionary," and in some instances relief has been granted, not because of the use of the phrase "Webster's Dictionary" as an infringement of copyright, since the copyright of the original Webster's Dictionary expired generations ago and the earlier editions are perfectly open to reprint, but because the work complained of had the effect of deceiving the public by the unfair use of name or material, and was therefore contrary to equity.

The volume now issued by Geo. W. Ogilvie of Chicago, as Webster's Imperial Dictionary, is of a more ambitious nature, and revives the former controversy. The trade are entitled to be informed on the several aspects of this controversy, and it should be said frankly that the use of the word "Webster" is not in itself in contravention of copyright law. It is, however, meaningless, except as a catchword, on any dictionary which is not in continuation of and a part of the Webster series. If, however, the new work comprises and is built upon the material of the Webster's International Dictionary, there would seem to be claim under the copyright laws that such use of dictionary material within the period of the copyright of the Webster International would be an infringement of the copyright of that dictionary, not because of the use of the word "Webster's" but because of the use of the material, which, quite as much as the title, is the subject of copyright. The courts have shown an increasing tendency to protect copyrighted material, even though in altered form; and this point seems to be the crux of the present controversy. It is at least to be regretted that Mr. Ogilvie in publishing a dictionary of such importance as that which he is now pushing, had not chosen to let the work stand on its own merits, without confusing its origin by the use of the word "Webster." The trade will watch with interest the outcome of the litigation, in which Messrs. Merriam seem to be seeking to prove that Mr. Ogilvie has used material copyrighted by them, and in which Mr. Ogilvie is seeking in turn to restrain the Merriam company from interfering with the sale of his dictionary by raising in the trade fears of present or future interference with it.

THERE are persistent rumors within and without the trade of a contemplated amalgamation of the Appleton house with the Harper house—as to which, however, there is no authoritative statement. The rumor is based upon the facts that Mr. Wm. W. Appleton has become Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Appleton company, a more honorary and less active position than that of President; that two other members of the Appleton family have been retired from the Board of Directors; that Mr. J. M. Sears has become President, and Mr. Geo. S. Emery Second Vice-president, both of these gentlemen having been associated with the Harper house; and that Mr. Roy Mason, formerly of the Sun, has become advertising manager for the Appletons. It is understood that Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan has in large measure financed both the Sun and the Harper house in recent years, and the new directorate of the Appleton corporation is thought to point in the same direction.

OBITUARY NOTES.

COLONEL PRENTISS INGRAHAM, of Chicago, said to have been the author of more than one thousand novels, is dead at Beauvoir, Miss., at the age of sixty years. Colonel Ingraham was born at Natchez, Tenn., and was the son of the Rev. Joseph H. Ingraham, who was the author of "A Prince of the House of David." He served in the Confederate army as colonel, and after the war began writing stories, which were published in various weekly papers and in book form. For years he turned out a novel every few weeks.

AN ANTHOLOGY OF IRISH LITERATURE.

A MONUMENTAL anthology, "Irish Literature," of which Dr. Justin McCarthy is editor-in-chief, with Dr. Douglas Hyde, Lady Gregory, Dr. Maurice F. Egan and J. Jeffrey Roche as associate editors, is to be one of the interesting results of the present "Celtic movement," or revival of Irish literature. The work will appear in ten volumes of four hundred and fifty pages each, with numerous illustrations in black and white and color, being published in this country by John D. Morris & Co., of Philadelphia. Its purpose is set forth by Dr. McCarthy as being "to give to the reading world a comprehensive, if only rapid, glance at the whole development of literary art in prose and poetry from the opening of Ireland's history." So many Irish writers are, in the popular mind, simply names in English literature, that this anthology will reveal to a surprising extent how great has been the influence of Ireland on English letters. The names of Swift, Goldsmith, Sterne, Knowles, Steele, Sheridan, Burke, Tyndall, Lefanu, Aubrey De Vere, Bernard Shaw, Lecky, Mahaffy, Richard Burton, James Bryce, are but a few that come to mind in this connection, aside from such distinctively Irish names as Moore, Lever, Lover, Edgeworth, Carleton and Boucicault. Charles Welsh is managing editor, and with his editorial associates has had the assistance of an advisory committee consisting of Stephen Gwynne, G. W. Russell, Standish O'Grady, John E. Redmond, D. J. O'Donoghue and Professor F. N. Robinson, of Harvard, who have selected the material to be included.

Articles on special departments of Irish literature will be contributed by the editors and by other chosen writers. Among them Charles Welsh will give "A Brief Glance at Irish History" and "Fairy and Folk Tales of Ireland;" W. B. Yeats will treat "Modern Irish Poetry;" Douglas Hyde, "Early Irish Literature;" Maurice Francis Egan, "Irish Novels;" D. J. O'Donoghue, "Irish Wit and Humor;" and Stephen Gwynne, "The Irish Literary Theatre." Brief biographical and critical sketches of each author represented in the anthology will accompany the extracts; there will be a glossary of Irish words and terms, and full and exhaustive indexes; the illustrations will include portraits and historic scenes and many facsimiles of illuminated manuscripts, old prints, etc. The tenth volume will be devoted to the Celtic language, containing brief biographies of ancient Celtic writers, translations from whose writings appear elsewhere in the work; many folk tales, ancient proverbs and songs, and stories and sketches by modern Irish writers, printed in Gaelic, with the English translation facing the text. It will be seen that the work possesses unusual interest, as the first complete survey of Irish life and letters—an encyclopædia of Irish thought, character and traditions; and it has been aptly said that its showing, as a whole, must be to present to many readers "a veritable expansion of Ireland, so many great names are involved for which England commonly gets all the glory."

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN STEVENS' INDEX TO ARCHIVES OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

It is stated that the "magnum opus" of the late Benjamin Franklin Stevens, "of Vermont"—his great handwritten index to the official papers bearing upon the American Revolution, contained in European archives—has been completed by the efforts of Mrs. Stevens and her late husband's partner, Henry John Brown, and that the final ten volumes have been placed in the binder's hands.

Benjamin Franklin Stevens during his long career as a London bookseller and importing agent, made the preparation of this index his special personal activity. For thirty years or more he and the twenty or more secretaries, whom he paid out of his own pocket, collected the necessary material. At the end of that time they had catalogued all the documents relating to the Revolution in the possession of the English Government, in the private collections of Great Britain, and in the official archives of Spain, France and Holland. There were something more than 161,000 items indexed in this way, and 180 folio volumes, of 500 pages each, to catalogue the character and location of every one. At first it had been hoped that the United States Government would subsidize the work, and later that when completed it would be purchased for the Library of Congress. A bill authorizing such purchases was introduced in the House, and favorably reported, but the matter then fell through, and Mr. Stevens made no attempt for other disposition of it, although he estimated that it had cost him about $100,000.

After Mr. Stevens' death, two years ago, it was decided to complete the index, the material having been left in an advanced state of preparation. The one hundred and eighty volumes, which are said to be written out in a "copperplate" handwriting, comprise three series, one, of fifty volumes, which gives the list of the European documents bearing upon the period treated, in the order in which the various documents appear in the different foreign archives; another, of one hundred volumes, which gives the papers in chronological order, with a minute description of each; and a third, of thirty volumes, which contains a list of the 161,000 items in alphabetical order, with, in most cases, the names of both writers and receivers in double entry.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

F. Marion Crawford is spending the summer on his estate in Sorrento, having dispatched to his publishers the ms. of his new novel, "Whosoever Shall Offend." The story's scenes are laid in modern Rome and Sicily.

Mrs. Meynell has undertaken to edit for Grant Richards's "Smaller Classics" a selection from the poems of Herbert, Crashaw, Vaughan and Treherne. It will probably appear under the title of "The Mystics," (seventeenth century.)

Jacob A. Riis is spending the summer in Copenhagen, having finished correcting the proofs of his new book, "Is There a Santa Claus?" which will appear in the autumn with the Macmillan imprint. Some children wrote to ask him that question, and the book is his reply.

Miss Alice Farwell Brown is summering at Isle au Haut, Me. A third edition has just been called for of her recent book, "In the Days of Giants." Another author who is visiting Maine is Clara Louise Burnham, who is at Bailey Island as usual. She has just finished a sequel to "Jewel," entitled "Jewel's Story Book," which is to appear this fall.

Booth Tarkington, author of "The Two Vanrevels" and "The Gentleman from Indiana," has returned to America after nearly a year's stay in Europe. He lived in Rome last winter, and has been spending most of the spring and summer in Paris. He will live next winter in New York, and expects to spend his time studying phases of political life and continuing the political stories which he has been writing for McClure's Magazine.

The question of the identity of the "Billy," to whom Stewart Edward White dedicated his book, "The Forest," has at last been satisfactorily settled. A literary personal having stated that "Billy" was Mr. White's half-breed guide, its dictum has generally been accepted by readers. But his publishers now definitely announce that "Billy" was the author's special name for Miss Grant, of Santa Barbara, Cal., who is now Mrs. Stewart Edward White.

Gelett Burgess spends his summer at Scituate, Mass. In a corner of an adjacent orchard he has built a little house composed entirely of packing cases. This building, which he has named the "Goop Hotel," consists of four rooms, two stories and a stairway, piazza, doors, and windows complete, the whole ground plan covering an area of only six by eight feet. The rooms are high enough for a child of four to stand erect, and the exploration of the residence, to an adult, is achieved with considerable difficulty. The upper chamber measures only three feet square, and here Mr. Burgess has spent hours of seclusion in writing. The house is an object of interest to children for miles about, and has been the scene of numerous tea parties.

Jaakoff Prelooker, editor of The Anglo-Russian, a periodical published in London, is preparing the first novel dealing with events of the Russo-Japanese War. A Russian count, formerly adjutant of the Czar but now a leader of the revolutionary party, is the hero, and the heroine is an English girl of independent means, who has been trained as a nurse. Arrangements are being made for the simultaneous publication of the book in England and America. The author not long ago published a series of articles in the Russian language appealing to the Russian constitutional reformers to cease their internal dissensions and to unite for a common cause. He followed these up by a visit to the Continent, where he personally interviewed many of the Russian political leaders, and the inner life of the revolutionary movement, with the latest developments of which he has thus familiarized himself, forms the background of his romance.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The Boston Investigator, which was founded by Abner Kneeland in 1831, and is said to be the oldest free thought or liberal newspaper in the world, has been consolidated with the New York Truth Seeker.

THE current Scottish Historical Review contains an article by A. H. Millar on "The Scottish Ancestors of President Roosevelt;" and essays on "The Danish Ballads," by W. P. Ker; and on "The Mediæval Stage," by Mary Bateson.

THE September Century contains an article entitled "Hidden Egypt," by Mrs. Agnes Smith Lewis, of Cambridge, Mass., describing the adventures of herself and her sister, Mrs. Gibson, in a search for manuscripts among the Coptic monasteries of Egypt and Nitria, to which they were the first women ever admitted. Mrs. Lewis has made one of the greatest biblical discoveries of the nineteenth century—an ancient Syriac text of the four gospels.

THAT magazines occasionally indulge in a real newspaper "scoop" is shown by the enterprise of Leslie's Monthly Magazine in securing the exclusive story of the kidnapping and capture of Ion H. Perdicaris, told by himself, by getting into correspondence with Perdicaris by courier while he was still in the clutches of Raissuli, the Morocco bandit. The story, which is said to be well told and vitally interesting, will appear in the September number.

THE PROVIDENCE JOURNAL CO. have issued for private distribution "Half a Century with the Providence Journal," being a record of the events and associates connected with the past fifty years of the life of Henry R. Davis, secretary of the company. The Journal serves a wealthy and generous community and has championed many public movements. Its history and that of its several editors and many contributors, together with many portraits of great interest, make a most readable volume.

HENRY MILLS ALDEN on Tuesday, August 16, completed the thirty-fifth year of his editorship of Harper's Magazine, to which he was graduted from the editorship of Harper's Weekly, a position he had filled for six years. Mr. Alden began his life-work as a school teacher, later wrote editorials for The Evening Post and The New York Times during the administrations of William Cullen Bryant and Henry J. Raymond, and began his long connection with the house of Harper by editing for them "The Pictorial History of the Civil War."

THE September number of The World's Work is the first to be printed in Doubleday, Page & Co.'s own press rooms in their new building in East Sixteenth Street, New York. The difficulties under which the printing has heretofore been done have been great. The August number, for example, containing nearly 7,000,000 separate sheets was printed in three different places, bound in a fourth and much of the edition mailed in a fifth. Both Country Life in America and The World's Work manufacturing departments, it is hoped, will be fully installed in another month.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

JOHN MURPHY CO. call attention to their very full list of Catholic Bibles and prayer-books in the "Trade List Annual" just issued.

THE EVERETT PRESS, Boston, will issue next week "Sequil," Judge Shute's continuation of "The Diary of a Real Boy," which is said to be full of genuine American humor.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE'S new book, "Painted Shadows," will be published in the autumn by Little, Brown & Co., who recently brought out his "Love Letters of the King."

THE wide range of interest in Mrs. Wiggin's "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" is shown by the fact that it has just been added to the list of books for Crews' Libraries in the United States Navy.

BROADWAY PUBLISHING COMPANY, New York City, announce "Satan of the Modern World," by Edward Grattan Doyen; "The New Womanhood," by Winifred Harper Cooley; and "Lady Century," by Mrs. A. G. Kintzel.

ROBERT CLARKE COMPANY announce for early issue "The Crest of the Little Wolf," a tale of young Lovell and the Wars of the Roses, by Thomas D. Rhodes; and for October 1 "In-to the Yukon," by William Seymour Edwards.

ROHDE & HASKINS will issue during September "Toasts and Tributes," compiled by Arthur Gray, with decorations by G. W. Hood and title-page by H. C. Bamburgh, a very useful book for those often called upon to say the pleasant thing at festive gatherings.

J. B. HULST, 936 Fifth Avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich., has issued "Een Man des Volks," which is the life of Professor Geert Egbert Boer, compiled from his diaries and papers by Professor G. K. Henkes. He offers agents 25 per cent. and a free copy for every dozen sold.

L. S. DICKEY & CO. have just issued "Free America," by Bolton Hall, a son of the late Dr. John Hall, who has made law and real estate his life-work. He is impressed with the many dangers of our commercial system, and sounds a note of warning especially in the interests of business.

A RARE copy of the Kilmarnock edition of Burns's poems was sold at Sotheby's recently for £220. An autograph early draft of "The Brigs of Ayr" realized £169. A series of twenty-three letters from Browning to Alfred Domett, (the "Waring" of the poem,) fetched £150. A defective copy of the first Shakespeare folio was sold for £420.

L. C. PAGE & CO. will publish on August 30 "The Hound of the North," a new novel by Ridgwell Cullom, author of "The Story of the Foss River Ranch." The scene of the story is laid in Canada and the Klondike, and it gives vivid descriptions of Canadian farming life. The author, who is at present living in London, has spent several years in the Northwestern part of Canada, and his own experiences are said to have furnished most of the brisk and stirring incidents, now utilized by him as literary "material."

THE GRAFTON PRESS announces that it has recently added a genealogical department, in charge of an expert genealogist of many years' experience. Among its publications of this nature, already issued or under way, are "The History of Ancient Wethersfield," by Dr. Henry R. Stiles; "A Biographical Memorial of Gen. Daniel Butterfield," "A Memorial of Benjamin Franklin Newcomer," "Register of the Colonial Dames of the State of New York," "The Ancestry of Leander H. Crall" and "The Life of Gen. Fitz John Porter."

THOMAS WHITTAKER announces for publication in September "Sermons on Social Subjects," delivered under the auspices of the Christian Social Union of London, and preached by prominent Church of England clergy indentified with social and economic interests, including the Bishop of Rochester, Dean Stubbs of Ely, the Rev. Wilford J. Richmond, the Rev. J. Llanwellyn Davies and Canon Bristow. He has just issued King's "Classical and Foreign Quotations" in an entirely rewritten and up-to-date edition. The revision is so stringent the present edition is practically an entirely new book.

SILVER, BURDETT & CO. have among their newest and forthcoming books "The Elements of Geometry," by Walter N. Bush and John B. Clarke; "The Essentials of Algebra," by Rob. J. Aley and David A. Rothrock; "The Silver Song Series," by Leonard B. Marshall; "The Common Book of Vocal Music," an addition to the Modern Music Series by Eleanor Smith; "The Making of the Empire State," by Jacques W. Redway, in the Stories of the States Series; "An Introductory Physiology," by H. W. Conn, in the Standard Physiologist Series; and "Monday Morning Talks," by D. J. Herbert Phillips.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. have in preparation for the early autumn three fine Riverside Press editions which will be welcomed by those able to indulge in the luxuries of book-buying. These comprise Boccaccio's "Life of Dante," translated by Philip H. Wicksteed, limited to 250 copies; "The Georgics of Virgil," translated by George W. Mackail, limited to 300 copies, and "Certaine Sonnets," by Sir Philip Sidney, limited to 400 copies. To the same series belong the three folio volumes of Florio's "Montaigne," and the volumes of Ronsard, Petrarch, De Maistre, Southey, Lowell and others which have been issued in similar form.

HERBERT B. TURNER & CO. announce for fall publication "The Island of Tranquil Delights," by Charles Warren Stoddard, with photogravure illustrations; Robert Louis Stevenson's "Story of a Lie" in twelvemo form and in their dainty series of Turner Reprints; "The Quincunx Case," a detective story, by William Dent Pitman; "Gabriel Praed's Castle," a story of an art fraud, by Alice Jones; "Professor Loodahl," from the Norwegian of Alexander Kielland, by Rebecca Blair Flandrau; "Piney Home," a story of the Maine woods by George Selwyn Kimball; and "Lyrics of Life and Love," by William Stanley Braithwaite.

W. C. & F. P. CHURCH have in press the new "Drill Regulations for Infantry," issued by the United States War Department, which will supersede the regulations now in use in the regular army, national guard and militia of the United States. It will be published, as the present drill has been published, in two editions, one containing the drill complete, precisely as issued by the Government. The other edition will contain the authorized drill with interpretations settling difficult questions that arise in the study of the drill. The latter volume, with interpretations, will be found indispensable to students of the drill, and it is well worth the small additional charge for it.

BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY are kept so busy turning out their great recent successes that they have no time to add new titles to their remarkable list of popular books. "The Castaway," Miss Rives's romantic story of Lord Byron's meteoric career; "The Yoke," Elizabeth Miller's scholarly story of the redeeming of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage; Lynde's "Grafters;" Phillips's "The Cost;" Miss Michelson's "In the Bishop's Carriage;" and "Huldah," that sunshiny story of Texas by Alice MacGowan and Grace MacGowan Cooke, continue their satisfactory career in all parts of the land. A very rich list of juveniles for the holidays is also now ready for the trade.

MAYNARD, MERRILL & CO. have issued in their English Classic Series four of the most representative addresses of the late Henry W. Grady, edited by Edna Henry Lee Turpin. The collective title for the volume is "The New South, and Other Addresses," and it contains "The New South," delivered before the New England Club, New York, in 1886; The South and Her Problems," before the State Fair, Dallas, Texas, in 1887; "At the Boston Banquet," before the Boston Merchants' Association, in 1889, and "Before the Bay State Club," in 1889. A biography of the orator, telling of his life, from his early attempts to run a country newspaper to his commanding position on the Atlanta Constitution, and as dictator of Georgia, forms the introduction.

THE AMERICAN UNITARIAN ASSOCIATION will reissue the original set of William Ellery Channing's works in six volumes, with an introduction by John W. Chadwick, and will also publish a selection from the works of Channing to be called "Discourses and Essays," the material to be reprinted under the general heads of "Social Questions," "The Religious Life" and "Controversial Theology." Other books in preparation are "The Wandering Heart," by David Starr Jordan; "John Gilley," the story of a Maine farmer and fisherman, by Charles W. Eliot; "Christianity and Religions of the World," by J. Edith Carpenter; "The Trinity and the Incarnation," by Richard A. Armstrong; "A Book of Daily Strength," compiled by W. D. Davis from well-known Unitarian writers; "The Supremacy of Jesus," by Joseph H. Crooker; and "Pillars of the Temple," by Minot J. Savage.

THE BRITISH MUSEUM "Return," or annual report, for the year ending March 31, 1904, records additions to the Department of Printed Books of 27,370 volumes and pamphlets, and 64,065 "parts of volumes or numbers of serial publications." As usual, record and brief description of the most important accessions in books, manuscripts, maps, etc., are given. Among these may be noted "Tukaio-li; or, The Two Fair Cousins, a Chinese novel from the French versions of M. Abel Remusat," published in London in 1827, in two volumes. The copy contains manuscript notes by Leigh Hunt and a few by Carlyle. Of Leigh Hunt's notes the following are quoted: "Finished the third regular reading of this curious and delightful book, September 18, 1837. L. H." "Finished my fourth reading with increased admiration and with gratitude for comfort in great distress, February 21, 1853. L. H." Does not this offer a hint to some publisher to include this "curious and delightful" book, wholly unknown to the present generation of readers, in some series of literary reprints?

The Macmillan Company is preparing a new edition of Dr. Edward Everett Hale's "Memories of a Hundred Years," which was so well received on its publication two years ago and is now out of print. The author has added three new chapters. One tells the story of his childhood, his boyhood, his and his brother Nathan's achievements as children, his school and college days, and his ministry at Worcester, Mass., dwelling especially upon the good causes of those days, including the Irish Immigration Movement and the Emigrant Aid Company in which Dr. Hale was especially interested. In "The History of Magazines" he tells about the starting and the early numbers of various magazines in which he was interested and about their editors. "Then and Now" is an attempt to present a contrast between the middle of the last century and 1904. In this chapter the author describes his journey from Boston to Washington in 1844, which was achieved in thirteen days and involved twenty-eight changes of carriage. The new edition will contain all the illustrations in the original issue. It will appear late next month.

Among useful tools for students, or for serious readers, is the blank book devised by Melvin Hix and published by Hinds, Noble & Eldredge, in which may be recorded "A Brief Outline of the Books I Have Read." The sixty-one pages contain separate sets of questions for fiction and the drama, for the essay and for lyric poetry—in all twenty-five descriptions can be written into the book. Under the heading "Fiction, Narrative Poetry and the Drama," spaces are left for the title of the book, its author, the dates of his birth and death, the time and scene of the story, principal and subordinate characters, preliminary events, "climax," concluding events, quotations, author's style, remarks, and the date of reading; under "The Essay and the Oration" are spaces marked for the title, name of author, dates of his birth and death, occasion which called forth the essay, the author's purpose, point of view, introductory arguments, conclusions, style, quotations, remarks, and when read; and under "Lyric Poetry" can be written the title, name of author, dates of his birth and death, kind of lyric, prevailing foot and line, rhyme scheme, stanza, introduction, central theme, secondary theme, conclusion, style, diction, etc., quotations, remarks, and when read. At the beginning of the volume spaces are given for the titles of the books, which are to form the "table of contents."

Fox, Duffield & Co. will publish at once "The Blue Grass Cook Book," by Minnie C. Fox, with an introduction by John Fox, Jr., in which are given over six hundred recipes famous among Southern housekeepers, many of which, although tried favorites in Virginia and Kentucky kitchens, have never before been made public; "Misrepresentative Men," by Col. D. Streamer, who has followed his "Ruthless Rhymes" with a series of amusing verses on the celebrities of the world, from Adam to Roosevelt; and "The Fusser's Book," a manual of witty and satirical advice for "ladies' men," by Anna Archbald and Georgina Jones, whose epigrams in "The Fusser's Calendar" are pleasantly remembered. All the books mentioned are fully and characteristically illustrated. They announce also a reprint of that charming American classic, St. John Crevecoeur's "Letters from an American Farmer," edited by W. P. Trent, of Columbia, with an appendix containing hitherto unpublished letters from Crevecoeur to Benjamin Franklin; "Crozier's General Armory," a record of nearly two thousand American families entitled to coat armor, edited by William Armstrong Crozier; and the first volume of the transcription and reprint of "Virginia County Records," devoted to abstracts of wills, deeds, marriage license bonds, lists of Revolutionary soldiers, and like documents, of Spotsylvania County, this work, with the Crozier volume, being published by arrangement with the Genealogical Society.

A. S. Barnes & Company announce a long list of books for publication during the early fall. In fiction they will issue "The President," by Alfred Henry Lewis, to be uniform with his very successful story, "The Boss;" "A Captain in the Ranks," by George Cary Eggleston; and "The Pagan's Progress," by Gouverneur Morris. In history there will be a new revised edition in two volumes of "Barnes' Popular History of the United States;" a new edition of "Battles of the American Revolution," by Brig.-Gen. H. B. Carrington; and a new volume in the Trail Makers' Series devoted to "The Journey of De Soto from Florida to the Mississippi River," told by the Gentleman of Elvas and other contemporaries, edited and introduced by Edward G. Bourne, of Yale University. To the Woman's Home Library, edited by Margaret E. Sangster, will be added "Beauty Through Hygiene," by Dr. Emma E. Walker; "House and Home," by M. E. Carter; "The Courtesies," a handbook of etiquette, by Eleanore B. Clapp; and "Correct Writing and Speaking," by Mary A. Jordan, of Smith College; and in the Lives of the Great Writers' Series the new volumes will be "In the Days of Chaucer;" and "In the Days of Shakespeare," both by Tudor Jenks. The juveniles will come a little later, and will include "The Search," a story of the old frontier, by E. P. Weaver; "The Three Prisoners," a story of the Civil War, by William Henry Shelton; and "The Island Camp," by Captain Bonehill, the opening volume of the Field and Forest Series.

A. C. McClurg & Co have a promising array of books in readiness for the fall season. Their numerous valuable reprints of historical annals of the West will be increased by the reprint of Lahontan's "New Voyages to North America," following exactly the English edition of 1703, with introduction, notes and analytical index by Dr. Reuben Gold Thwaites; and "Gass's Journal of the Lewis and Clark Expedition," reprinted from the edition of 1811, with an introduction by Dr. James K. Hosmer. "A Short History of Oregon," compiled by Sidona V. Johnson, gives a compact record of the state, from the discoveries of Lewis and Clark to the present day; and N. Dwight Harris has a thoughtful contribution to our political literature in his "History of Negro Servitude in Illinois and of the Slavery Agitation in That State, 1719-1864." Randall Parrish's new novel, "My Lady of the North;" Clarence S. Darrow's "Farmington," chronicling boyhood memories of a Pennsylvania town; and "Florence in the Poetry of the Brownings," in which the poems of Robert and Elizabeth Browning dealing with Florence have been collected by Anna B. McMahan, are likely to appeal to many readers; while for the children there are half a dozen new books—"Life Stories for Young People," giving in attractive separate volumes biographical romances of famous people; "In Search of the Okapi," a stirring tale of Central African adventure by Ernest Glanville; "The Little Giant, and Other Wonder Tales," by Thomas Dunn English; "The Wandering Twins," telling of children's adventures in Labrador, by Mary Bourchier Sanford; and "When Little Boys Sing," with words, pictures and music by John and Rue Carpenter.

PICK-UPS.

Mr. Chesterton's advice to Hall Caine, that he restrict his literary atmosphere to the Isle of Man, brings a metrical retort from a writer in the London Chronicle signing himself H. G.:

Hall Caine, attend! Expect no thanks
  For painting "Christians" and the Pope;
Confine yourself to matters Manx—
  Your island gives sufficient scope.

Corelli, cannot Avon's stream
  Content your soul, but you must be Indulging in the zealous scream
  'Gainst clerics and society?

Great Rider Haggard, why, alas!
  At doggy horrors make us dance?
Remember old Umslopogaas,
  And get to business with romance!

And Chesterton! (the moral fits)
  Do not forget, whene'er you write,
To knock an argument to bits
  By plainly proving black is white.

McCLURE, PHILLIPS & Co., NEW YORK

McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO., NEW YORK

"Under the greenwood tree, . . .
There will he find no enemy
But winter and rough weather."—(Shakespeare.)

Neither need he fear these if he will but read wherein Stewart Edward White imparts the secret—how to win warmth, shelter and food in the wildwood, and that without the aid of an overburdensome pack. These confidences of a thousand-mile canoe trip through Canada are fascinating as any novel.

THE FOREST

THE SILENT PLACES

Mr. White's last published book is the story of a far northern man-hunt. It has been continuously in the forefront of "best sellers."

THE BLAZED TRAIL

the stirring lumbering-camp novel, that made Mr. White's fame, is still in steady demand. It is now in its eighteenth edition.

THE MOUNTAINS

will be ready in the fall. It is a book for every nature-lover, and especially for every one who has travelled the wild West, no alkali plain or snowy peak. The record of a trip through the Sierra Nevadas is made to yield invaluable camping information.

Each Book is illustrated; The Silent Places, in color.
Each is $1.50; The Forest and The Mountains are net.

Holding Back the Advertising

IT seems to me ill-advised to ask book-readers to buy THE PILLAR OF LIGHT in the dog days. Summer days pass so quickly that I am willing to wait. This fall, when the newspaper advertising campaign begins, I shall remind the book-readers about Louis Tracy's last great story, THE PILLAR OF LIGHT.

However, any one who wants a good story on a hot day ought to be delighted with "THE PILLAR." Tracy chooses an English light-house for the scene of his latest book and describes in his peculiarly brilliant style a mad Atlantic gale. He fairly makes one hear the wind. And he tells a charming love story too.

DICTIONARY TALK

The time has gone by when past success is considered an element of strength. In this day and age, what your grandfather did counts for far less than what you can do yourself.

FOR INSTANCE—I believe that my grandfather was a sawyer in the little town of Kerriemuir (J. M. Barrie's "Thrums"), Scotland. I too am a sawyer—that is, I have "sawed wood" and published the best Webster's Dictionary that the world has ever seen. I CALL IT WEBSTER'S IMPERIAL DICTIONARY. Better than the "Unabridged"? says an old fogy—Pshaw—why the "Unabridged" is 40 years old. "Better than the International?" says another Rip Van Winkle. Well, he's been asleep for fourteen years—for it's 14 years since the International made its appearance.

DON'T BE AN OLD FOGY. Keep pace with your day and generation. The man who doesn't is giving himself a handicap that the genius of an Edison can't overcome.

GET ABOARD.—Send for a stock of Webster's Imperial or a single copy—examination convinces. Compare them all and the owners of Webster's Imperial will "bear away the palm" to such an extent that it will look like a procession leaving the Cathedral on Palm Sunday.

OLD AGE, YOUTH AND FROM A TO Z

A COMPARISON

Webster's Unabridged, 1545 Pages, Retail, any old price, aged 40 years.

Published by G. & C. Merriam Co.—but they seem to be ashamed to put their imprint on the title page (and justly so)—because the imprint is "PUBLISHED FOR THE TRADE."

Webster's International, 1681 Pages, Retail, $10.00, aged 14 years.

Webster's Imperial Dictionary contains 1956 pages from A to Z, Retails for $5.00. Although born as recently as Aug. 8, 1904, it's a very husky youth.
